VII. Your Duty to Provide Information and to Co-operateInformation

Dear customer

After the insured incident has occurred, we require your assistance.

Duty to provide information and assist in clarification

On the basis of the contractual agreement entered into, we may ask you to provide us with all information that is necessary to clarify the scope of liability (duty to provide information) and to clarify the matter fully (duty of clarification) to enable us to fully assess the claim. However, we may also request that you provide us with supporting documents, provided that such requests are reasonable.

Loss of benefits

If, contrary to the contractual agreements, you fail to provide us with information or give incorrect information, or wilfully fail to provide us with the supporting documents that we request, you will lose your entitlement to compensation. If breach of such obligations is based on gross negligence, we may reduce the benefits in proportion to the seriousness of the negligence. There will be no reduction if you prove that you have not been grossly negligent in infringing the obligations.

Notwithstanding a breach of your obligation to either provide information, assist in clarification, or provide supporting documents, we are still obliged to pay compensation insofar as you can prove that any violation of duty was neither the result of establishing the scope of the insured incident or the scope of our liability.

If you fraudulently breach the obligation to provide information to clarify matters or to provide supporting documents, we will in every case be released from our liability to pay the claim.

Note:

If a third party, and not you yourself, is entitled to the benefits under the contract, such third party must also provide information assist in clarifying matters and provide supporting documents.
